Man charged with attempted murder following attack in Crewe

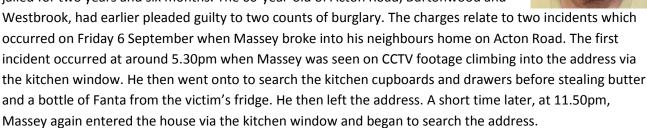

A 55-year-old man has been charged with attempted murder following a serious assault in Mill Street, Crewe in the early hours of Saturday morning (3 November).

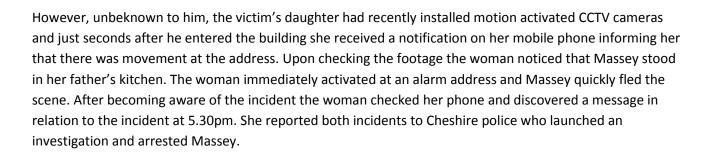

Furdinal Stewart, aged 55, of Downside Close in Ipswich, has been charged with attempted murder and possession of an offensive weapon. He has been remanded in custody and will appear at South Cheshire Magistrates Court tomorrow (Monday, 4 November). The incident happened at around 3.15am near the junction with Nantwich Road. The victim, a 32-year-old man, remains in a serious, but stable condition in hospital.

Man jailed for burgling elderly neighbours home

A Warrington man who broke into his elderly neighbour's home while he was in hospital has been jailed.

Ian Massey appeared at Liverpool Crown Court on Friday 1 November where he was jailed for two years and six months. The 60-year-old of Acton Road, Burtonwood and

Following today's sentencing Detective Sergeant Tom Hall said: "To stoop so low as to burgle your own neighbours home while he lay helpless in hospital is despicable. Massey knew that his neighbour was unwell, but even that didn't stop him from breaking into his home and stealing his property. During his interviews Massey attempted to divert the blame, claiming that he was the concerned neighbour. He told officers that he entered the house after hearing a loud bang and simply wanted to make sure his neighbour was OK. Although how searching through his cupboards and stealing from his fridge has anything to do with being concerned for his safety is beyond belief. Thankfully, after hearing all the evidence gathered against him, Massey pleaded guilty to the charges brought against him and is now facing the consequences of his actions."

Crewe burglar who threatened homeowner with a knife and assaulted him jailed

A burglar from Crewe who assaulted a homeowner and threatened him with a knife has been jailed.

Lee Moss, of no fixed abode, pretended to be a takeaway deliverer when the victim opened his front door to him at around 9.15pm on Wednesday 28 August. After being told that he must have the wrong address as the victim had not ordered a takeaway, Moss barged his way into the house in Bodnant Close, Leighton. The 41-year-old attempted to bind the victims' arms and legs together with cable ties. After the victim prevented him from doing so, Moss threatened the homeowner with a penknife and demanded money. He proceeded to punch the victim in the face several times and steal a quantity of cash from him. Moss also stole a mobile phone, two watches and a dressing gown from the house. As he searched for more items to steal, the victim managed to flee the address, calling at a neighbour's home for help. At that point Moss also ran out of the house but he was captured on CCTV and was subsequently identified, arrested and charged with aggravated burglary.

Traces of Moss' DNA were found on the cable ties that he used during the incident. He pleaded guilty to the aggravated burglary charge at Chester Crown Court on Friday 4 October. Moss returned to the court for sentencing on Friday 1 November, when he was jailed for seven years and six months; he was also sentenced to an additional four years on extended licence.

Following sentencing, Detective Constable Kieran Heathcote, who led the investigation for Crewe CID, said: "Lee Moss subjected the homeowner to a terrifying ordeal that may have only lasted 10 minutes but will live with him for the rest of his life. He answered the door to a complete stranger who claimed to be delivering a takeaway and ended up being threatened at knifepoint and assaulted during a particularly abhorrent burglary which left him with minor injuries that required hospital treatment. It is always a traumatic experience being the victim of a burglary and being targeted in your own home, which is the place that you should be able to feel most safe. But what this victim was subjected to was the stuff of nightmares and I am delighted that Moss has now been brought to justice for his sickening crime. Thankfully incidents such as this are extremely rare and I hope that the custodial sentence imposed on Moss by Chester Crown Court deters others from committing similar crimes. I also hope that it gives the victim some closure and enables him to move forward with his life."

On top of his prison sentence, Moss was also handed a restraining order.

Chief Inspector Simon Newell, of Crewe Local Policing Unit, said: "This case highlights the fact that you should not open the door to strangers. You should use your door chain, if you have one, when answering the door. If you don't have a door chain ask the caller who they are through the door before opening it. If you don't know them and are not expecting them then don't open the door. They may not be who they say they are."

Mindless vandals cause disruption across Halton and Warrington

Mindless vandals caused disruption across Halton and Warrington last night, Wednesday 30 October, resulting in more than 80 reports of anti-social behaviour and criminal damage across the north of the county.

A number of additional police officers had been deployed to hot spot areas as part of an ongoing operation to tackle anti-social behaviour over the Hallowe'en and bonfire period. Despite this, a small number of thoughtless individuals were intent on damaging properties and vehicles. In total, police officers responded to 30 incidents in Widnes, 22 incidents in Runcorn and 29 incidents in Warrington. These included a number of vehicles damaged, including one being tipped on its side and one that was damaged by a firework, a number of buses damaged by stones, and two police cars were also damaged – resulting in them being taken off the road for the rest of the night. Police officers and firefighters also dealt with a number of nuisance fires which involved fires in children's play areas, wheelie bin fires and a small fire on a boat in Warrington.

Chief Superintendent Bill Dutton said: "Damaging property and vehicles is simply unacceptable behaviour and is extremely distressing to the victims. Furthermore, it has much wider implications for the local community. We had an increased officer presence out on the streets making sure crime and anti-social behaviour was kept to a minimum and members of the public felt safe, but despite our best efforts there were still a minority of people intent on causing mindless vandalism and causing disruption within their communities. A number of police cars were damaged, so much so that they had to be taken off the road for the rest of the night. While a smashed windscreen might not sound like a serious crime, damage such as this has a number of knock on implications. Not only were there less police cars on the streets, but it also meant that officers were tied up dealing with the criminal damage - when they could have been responding to real emergencies.

Increased police patrols will continue in those areas affected throughout this week and into the weekend.

Cheshire Fire and Rescue Service's Deliberate Fire Reduction Manager, Andy Gray, said: "People might see starting a small bonfire or setting off fireworks as a bit of harmless fun, but fire is extremely unpredictable and can easily get out of control and spread – and tragic accidents can happen with fireworks. While firefighters are out dealing with nuisance fires, they are not in the best position to respond to genuine emergencies. We will continue to monitor high activity areas throughout the Hallowe'en and Bonfire period, and we are encouraging the public to support us in reducing deliberate fires by ensuring wheelie bins and rubbish are not left out in the open - once your bin has been emptied please ensure you put it away securely."

Anyone with more information in relation to any of the incidents that took place last night contact Cheshire Police on 101. Alternatively information can be passed on anonymously, via Crimestoppers, on 0800 555 111.

Serving Cheshire police officer appears in court

A serving Cheshire police officer has appeared in court charged with misconduct in public office and attempting to pervert the course of justice.

Michael Luckett, from Warrington, was initially arrested in May 2019 in connection with incidents which occurred between 27 February and 24 May 2019. The 31-year-old was subsequently summonsed to appear at Manchester Magistrates' Court on Tuesday 29 October where he was charged with misconduct in public office and attempting to pervert the course of justice. Luckett has been released on bail and is next due to appear at Manchester Crown Court on 26 November 2019.

Man who continued to stalk ex-girlfriend sentenced to three years in prison

A man who continued to stalk his ex-girlfriend despite being handed a restraining order has been told he will serve three years in prison.

Basil Thomas, aged 50, from Cheadle was found guilty of stalking and breaching the harassment restraining order at Manchester Magistrates Court on 30 September. He was then sentenced at Chester Crown Court on Monday 28 October. Thomas was also handed an indefinite restraining order. Thomas broke his order after less than a month for coming within 100 meters of the 46-year-old woman and visiting her home address. After contacting the police a tracking device was later found on her car. The order was put in place in June 2019 after Thomas previously caused his victim increased distress after bombarding her with letters, emails and visits to her home when their six year relationship ended.

On the afternoon of 19 July Thomas followed his ex-girlfriend around a local supermarket in Macclesfield until she left the store. When she returned home and checked her CCTV, Thomas was seen climbing over a wall and entering her back garden. He then interfered with the camera by repositioning it to face the sky and then removed the black mask covering his face but he was still caught on camera. Thomas also turned up outside her mum's hospice and a few days before his arrest he admitted watching her and her daughter while out shopping in Cheadle. After the victim told officers she felt she was being followed, a search of her car was made and the tracking device was recovered. On 15 August officers arrested Thomas at his home address.

Speaking after the sentencing Detective Constable Alison Shields, of Cheshire Police's Public Protection Directorate, said: "This case has proved yet again how Thomas is an obsessive stalker. Despite knowing the clear distress his behaviour had caused in the past he dismissed his victim's feelings and continued to cause her pain by going to great lengths to follow her. As a result he broke his restraining order and has now received a custodial sentence. I hope this now sends a clear message to Thomas while also showing others the consequences of this type of behaviour and how serious we take cases like these. The victim has been incredibly brave in coming forward to report Thomas. I would encourage anyone who feels they may be a victim of stalking to please get in touch by calling Cheshire Police on 101."

Crewe man given criminal behaviour order

A 23-year-old man from Crewe has been handed a two year criminal behaviour order after making the lives of neighbours a misery.

Tarren Mingins, from Smallbrook Walk in Crewe was given a two year criminal behaviour at Crewe Magistrates court on 23 October 2019. The Order has conditions not to cause a public nuisance, or throw any item in a public place or causing damage to property that is not his own in such a way that would cause distress to another person. He is also ordered not to force entry into anyone's property and is barred from entering an exclusion zone which incorporates the Brookhouse Estate including Davenport Avenue, The Birches, Claughton Avenue, The Circle, Briggs Avenue and all alleyways. Mingins is permitted to enter Heywood Green, Smallbrook Walk, The Brookhouse Drive play area and the path from Heywood Green to the Brookhouse Drive play area as well as parts of Artle Road and Brookhouse Drive. Mingins is also barred from associating with named people.

PC Sheridan Tomkinson said: "Tarren caused misery for a number of years making lives difficult for those affected. The conditions placed on Tarren mean that if he breaks them he faces time in prison. I hope this sends a strong message that we will not tolerate this kind of behaviour or bullying and intimidation in our town, and continue to work closely with our partners to take robust action against those who persistently cause a misery in our community."

Warrington Borough Police in the spotlight in new book by former bobby Retired bobby Paul Carter has seen the fruits of his labour finally come into being thanks to the support of volunteers at the museum of Policing in Cheshire.

Paul was a member of the former Warrington County Borough Police which was amalgamated with Lancashire Constabulary in 1969 with Warrington later becoming part of Cheshire in 1974. He retired from Cheshire Constabulary in 1994. The 75 year-old's passion for police history prompted him to compile a history of policing in Warrington but with the onset of Motor Neuron Disease earlier in the year it looked like it might never be published. But with the help of museum colleague and former Cheshire officer Will Brown his work has now found its way into print with the title 'Borough Bobbies'. Paul conducted detailed research with the help of staff at Warrington

Library, over a period of a couple of years, into the life and times of policing in the old borough force which was formed in 1847.

Will said: "It's a fascinating read which highlights the trials and tribulations together with the gallantry and courage of those serving as a police officer in Warrington in the Victorian era and beyond into the early 20th century." Paul's well-documented insight into policing in a small borough police force is well worth a read with wonderful anecdotes and fascinating insights into intriguing cases from the past together with more than 30 historic photographs. Will added: "I'd urge anyone with an interest in policing and its history to buy 'Borough Bobbies', which you can purchase from our museum."

To celebrate the achievement, an official book launch took place at the Cheshire Museum of Policing based at Arpley Street in Warrington on Friday 18 October. In attendance to acknowledge the dedication author Paul Carter has shown, were Cheshire Chief Constable Darren Martland and Cheshire Police and Crime Commissioner David Keane together with the Deputy Mayor of Warrington Councillor Maureen Creaghan.

Following the launch Cheshire Chief Constable Darren Martland said: "It is wonderful to see how passionate officers old and new are about policing. Policing is very much a vocation and is in your blood, even when you're retired. Reading about the days before fingerprint readers, tablets and tasers is captivating. It is heartening to see Paul and the volunteers are keeping the history of policing alive so that others can understand how it used to be done, and maybe take something away from it."

Cheshire's Police and Crime Commissioner, David Keane, said: "I was honoured to meet Paul and hear about how he has turned his passion for policing into a book full of tales from his days with Warrington Borough Police. It was fascinating to hear how the world of policing has changed over the years. I'm sure this collection of stories will inspire serving police officers and those with aspirations to join to Cheshire Constabulary."

The book is available to purchase from the museum shop based at County Police Office, Arpley Street, Warrington, Cheshire, WA1 1LQ, next to Warrington Bank Quay railway station.
